Will Spend $905,000 On Northern Airports

BY DICK JACKSON

OTTAWA, Trade Minister James MacKinnon stated here Tuesday night that the transport department was spending $905,000 this summer on improvement of airports facilities at Lac la Biche and Yellowknife.

Maintenance will cover McMurray, Embarrass, Smith, Resolution, Hay River, Providence, Simpson, Wrigley and Norman Wells, at an operating cost of $206,000 plus $40,000 for weather service.

To cut the gap between Edmonton and Smith, a survey is under way at Lac la Biche and the transport department expects to have one landing strip in operation this summer.

At Yellowknife a second landing strip, 5,200 by 500 feet, running north and south, is being built to cut across the first runway of the same dimensions.

Senator, Colonels Charge

Gen. Clark Wasted Lives

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Declaring that Gen. Clark had needlessly thrown "away gallant lives," Senator Tom Connally (Dem., Tex.), demanded Tuesday that eye-witnesses and top-ranking generals be questioned before action on Gen. Clark's promotion to the permanent rank of major-general.

His command, Gen. Clark, a former colonel of the 36th Division composed chiefly of Texas National Guardsmen, told the Senate military committee that Gen. Clark is unfit for promotion. They based their criticism on heavy casualties in two frontal attacks across the Rapido river early in 1944.

An official war department investigation that cleared Gen. Clark drew caustic criticism from Senator Connally as "one-sided."

Senator Connally said the official report was made by officers who "didn't see any smoke except from their pipes."

Col. Miller Ainsworth, protesting Gen.

Clark's promotion, said the Rapido assault had been ordered by Gen. Clark contrary to the advice of subordinate officers, and added:

"In fighting the nomination of Gen. Clark we are fighting not the individual alone but also a powerful military system in which efficiency and capability are disregarded for seniority and classmate control."

Deprecates Fear On Atomic Power

By Richard Sanburn

OTTAWA, -- People who shudder in horror at the murderous possibilities of atomic power should take a good look at history, and relax.

Robert H. Winters (Lib., Queen's-Lunenburg) responded to some of the fears expressed on this Tuesday during debate on reconstruction Minister Howe's bill for the creation of an atomic energy control board.

Mr. Winters recalled the discovery of steam power, of internal combustion energy and of electricity.

"All was through the rained rear in people that they would be thrown out of work," he said.

The fears proved groundless. The same would be true of atomic energy.

E. G. Hansel (S.C., Macleod) had referred to the possibility of thousands of coal miners being out of work.

44-Hour Week Starting July

Approved For City Employees

The 44-hour week will go into effect in the civic service on July 1 and the civic week will close on Saturday from Aug. 1st, it was decided Tuesday night by city council.

City commissioners' further recommendation that the 40-hour week be instituted on July 1, 1947, was rejected.

City Commissioner Hodgson said the 44-hour week would mean an increase in administration costs of about $11,000.

The report of City Engineer A. W. Haddow proposing a $1,200,000 development of the high level bridge for trolley bus and other traffic was referred to the financial committee.

Temporary and seasonal employees who entered the civic service prior to Dec. 22, 1941, will be given permanent status, if in the opinion of the city commissioners they are qualified for such appointment, council decided.

Council agreed with the recommendation of the finance committee that a grant of $2,000 be made toward the $30,000 publicity campaign to be conducted by the provincial government.

Mayor Ainsley was authorized to proclaim Monday, Aug. 5, as the annual civic holiday.

Council concurred in recommendations of commissioners for a grant of $300 to the Association of Ukrainian Canadians for the Western Canada Ukrainian Folk Festival in Edmonton, July 27-29 next, and to grant $300 to the expenses of the Edmonton Schoolboys band trip to Vancouver for the Diamond Jubilee celebrations.

Dominion Seizure Of Ships Indicated

TORONTO, (CP) -- Government control of all lake shipping Wednesday was not thought likely should the strike deadlock between ship owners and the Canadian Seamen's union continue.

There were reports of negotiations being resumed within a day or two and in Toronto, where strike strategy is centred, there were unconfirmed but reliable indications the government was preparing to step in by taking over ships on a temporary basis.

Canada's critical coal situation and the movement of grain were considered sufficiently vital to take the government to take a forceful role.

Case Labor Disputes Measure

Is Vetoed by President Truman

WASHINGTON, (AP) - President Truman vetoed the Case labor disputes bill Tuesday because, he said, it would compel men to work for private employers in a peacetime democracy.

Pointing that the measure "strikes at symptoms and ignores underlying causes" of strikes, Mr. Truman added: "Strikes against private employers cannot be ended by legislative decree."

Major provisions of the Case Bill included the creation of a federal mediation board, restrictions against any strike or lockout while the board sought solution of a labor dispute; a prohibition on secondary boycotts; and provision for court suits against employers or labor organizations violating collective bargaining contracts.

The president coupled his veto with a renewed plea for his own emergency strike control plan, for a senate-house study of the whole field of labor relations and for enactment of his long-stalemated domestic legislative program.

The house of representatives later up held President Truman's veto, thereby killing the Case bill at least temporarily. The vote was 139 to uphold the veto and 255 to override the president and fell five short of the two thirds majority required for senate action on the veto.

Britain, Supporter of Tito, Hears Self Accused as Foe

By Charles Nichols

LONDON, -- Britain, which unreservedly gave its full support to Marshal Tito in his fight to liberate Yugoslavia in 1945, now reads that it was "secretly accused" by the marshal of having conspired against him.

Headlines in London newspapers over reports of the Belgrade trial of General Mihailovitch, the leader and former war minister, bore the startling news that "Tito accused Britain general headquarters" and "Mihailovitch got orders from the British."

Basis of these allegations, made by Tito's government against Mihailovitch and Britain, was that a Gen. Mihailovitch (whose existence is denied by the war office) and a Captain Hudson had urged Mihailovitch to concentrate his efforts toward the liquidation of Tito's Communist Partisans.

In view of the political nature of these charges -- the difference between Britain and Germans -- there is the unavoidable impression here that the Mihailovitch trial is being used among other things to attack British prestige in southeastern Europe.

This impression is strengthened by the fact that evidence offered by American officers who were with Mihailovitch during the war has not been accepted, and Foreign Minister Bevin's evidence on Britain's part in the fight to liberate Yugoslavia has not been pressed any place in the trial, although it has been dispatched to Belgrade.

Wrong Approach To Russia Seen

OXFORD, ENGLAND, (REUTERS) -- Dr. Newlett Johnson, famed "Red Dean" of Canterbury, told the Oxford University Socialist club that "had we gone straight to Russia with the atom bomb secret and said: 'This is our weapon against Fascism,' every suspicion of us in the Soviet Union would have gone."

"Don't let people run away with the idea that Russia must always wait for a secret to be declared by the United States," said the dean, who has made several visits to Russia, including one a year ago during which he took part in the "Year of Russia." "They are even now making big strides of which we shall hear more."

"All we gained by withholding the secret was a momentary superiority, but Russia will soon draw level and we shall have lost a big chance of unity."

Azerbaijan Province Returns

To Jurisdiction of Teheran

LONDON, (CP) -- Azerbaijan province will return to the jurisdiction of the Iranian national government, said Premier Ahmad Qavam's terms, ending a bitter six-month dispute over the northwestern province's claims to autonomy, a foreign office spokesman said Tuesday.

A government commission, headed by Qavam's chief of staff, Prince Mohammad Firooz, arrived Tuesday in Tabriz, capital of the province, on what the foreign office spokesman said was a mission to "work out final details for accepting" the province back into the government.

A telegram from Firooz said the central government's commission was received at Tabriz airport by an honor guard of partisan warriors and conducted "through cheering crowds" to the headquarters of the autonomous government.

The commission was based solely upon the seven-point program announced by Qavam last April, and "nothing was granted beyond what was stated in the prime minister's seven points," the informant said.

Premier Jawar Pirshvani, who headed the separatist government at Tabriz, will become government general.

Tax Relief Imperative

Any fear federal price control and treasury administrators may have had that a substantial reduction in personal income taxes would have an inflationary effect on the national economy, no longer is valid. Price increases already sanctioned assure that nothing like that can happen.

All that taxation relief will do now is to help the average man catch up with higher prices. And unless it is really substantial, tax reduction will not do even that.

The bulk of consumer buying is done by the great middle class," the group whose individual incomes are over $1,000 a year and under $2,000.

Of the grand total of 2,365,000 personal income tax-payers of 1945, listed in the national statistic issued by the National Revenue Department, 425,000 had incomes of less than $1,000, and 62,000 had incomes above $2,000 a year.

This group of 487,000 group numbered 1,874,000.

This group's aggregate income in 1945 was placed at $7,835,000,000 or just over 62 percent of the total of taxable individual incomes of all Canadians.

This group's aggregate tax payments on that income amounted to approximately $381,000,000, or nearly 60 percent of the total amount of personal income taxes paid by Canadians on last year's income.

The amount of income taxes paid by this great "middle class" group was four times the amount paid by the more-than-40-year group and one-and-a-half times the amount paid by all those with incomes above $2,000.

Such figures, and they are official, make it clear that the real burden of income taxation in Canada, and it is as heavy as any in the world, falls on our skilled artisans, on the "white-collar" workers and on those engaged in business.

These should be given substantial relief by Finance Minister Tilley in his next budget, which should not be long delayed now.

The middle-class salaries group has been working hard for six years with all salaries frozen. Hourly rates of pay have been increased, over wide range of industries, with the approval of War Labor Board, salaries have been kept under a rigid ceiling.

While his pay has not been increased, the middle-class skilled man has had to go barefoot and has ruined income taxes -- and no feeling about it; they are taken from him before he even sees his weekly or monthly salary.

The test of the hardship of a tax is not what a man pays, but what he has left -- his take-home pay, in short -- and how short it now is.

Since the government is pursuing a policy of lifting price controls, and permitting only the slightest increases in salaries, it cannot in justice refuse to reduce the burden of income taxation by a substantial amount.

Use Brakes, Not Horns

An American newspaper, visiting Sweden for the Association of Motorists, has discovered that the horn is not a necessary part of a motor car. "Sweden," he says, "has the quietest street traffic in the world. It is against the law for motorists to sound their horns, so they've learned to use their brakes."

The result is that pedestrians are fewer and the pedestrian is considered to have some rights.

Alberta might well profit by Sweden's experience. Nothing is so futile as a dozen motorists all blasting away on their horns because of traffic delay. And nothing is more likely to make a pedestrian jump right into danger's path than a raucous blast six feet from his left ear.

Mosley's Money

Any remote prospect that Sir Oswald Mosley and his blackshirts might ever become a power in Britain has probably been squelched by a recent official disclosure of the relations between the British Fascist leader and Mussolini's Italian archives, captured during the war, show that as early as 1934-35, the Duke was secretly subsidizing Mosley to the tune of $240,000 a year.

For a politician whose program was one of superheated patriotism, this revelation should prove fatal.

An interesting feature of the record is the scepticism expressed by Dino Grandi, then Italian ambassador in London, who acted as the go-between in these transactions. "What," he moaned, "simply goes down the drain." Clearly the ambassador understood much better than either his master or Mosley the reaction of the average Briton to Fascism in any of its forms.

Moslems Accept Proposals

The complex Indian situation has taken a turn for the better with the decision of the Moslem League to accept the British cabinet's modified proposals for a federated government in India.

What caused this reversal is not entirely clear. Probably the leaders came to the conclusion that the British plan represented the highest degree of Moslem self-government which they could reasonably expect to get, without an open clash with the Hindu majority. This is borne out by the statement of the League's governing council, which emphasized its "earnest desire for a peaceful solution of the Indian problem."

The statement also makes clear, however, that the League's leaders have not abandoned their insistence on a separate and sovereign Moslem state of their own. Indeed, they regard the proposed constitution as a step in that direction, presumably because it authorizes the union of several provinces into a federal state.

Within the same federation, Pakistan might well take form on the basis of such a grouping of Moslem provinces. Whether, once formed, it would remain under the control of the central government is something for the future to decide.

Since the All India Congress, the chief spokesman for the Hindu majority, has already given its support to the plan, an effort to put it into operation in the near future seems likely. India's prospects for a peaceful transition to complete self-government are much brighter than they have been for many years.

PICAO Stays in Canada

The world's technical air centre will be located in Canada. This is the meaning of the decision of the forty-five member nations of the Provisional International Civil Aviation Organization to establish its permanent headquarters in the dominion. For six months, provisional headquarters has been located in Montreal, and that city will be likely to be selected for the permanent headquarters.

The western hemisphere won out by a substantial majority, although several nations wished PICAO to go to Paris, which had been the home for nearly a quarter of a century of the organization's predecessor, the International Commission on Air Navigation.

The selection of Canada is a signal tribute, more particularly as the dominion government has not been particularly helpful in its earlier relations with PICAO. Ottawa has now, however, pledged itself to a policy of immediate and practical co-operation.

The Third Column

MEDIATION BRITAIN'S ROLE?

By Walter Lippmann

At the Pilgrims' dinner in London, Field Marshal Smuts had something to say which is worth more attention than it has had. He pictured the world of tomorrow as divided into two great power groups, the Soviet Union in the east and the United States in the west, with the British Isles between them. Field Marshal Smuts assigned to the British Empire ... the task of interpreting the one to the other and thus preventing war.

There then we hear the most eminent and respected of British elder statesmen, who still holds high office, stating -- after a conference of the dominions in which he participated -- that the proper role of Britain is that of the mediating power between Russia and America.

X X X

This is the role which, as respects Europe and the Middle East, the United States was attempting to play until last October, when Secretary Purvis changed his policy radically and renounced it. He did this under heavy pressure from the British government and from British elements in the U.S. state department and in Congress. The role of the mediator, it was said, is immoral. You cannot mediate between right and wrong.

And then along comes Field Marshal Smuts to say at a dinner in honor of the new American ambassador, that the role of the mediator, which the United States has renounced, is to be the role of the British Empire. This ought to be enough. I should suppose, to prove that the role of the mediator power is not discreditable. But it indicates, I am strongly inclined to think, something else which is interesting and highly significant. It is that while American policy has been evolving in the direction proposed by Mr. Churchill in his Fulton speech, the evolution of British policy is in a different direction.

X X X

The line followed by Mr. Bevin in his first ten months was not consistent with the promises and the statements of the British Labor party. Mr. Bevin's policy has been to carry on the policies he found when he took office. Whatever the effects of the line laid down by Mr. Churchill and the old hands in the Foreign Office gave the labor government a year of freedom from conservative criticism. As for the affairs, and therefore much greater freedom in domestic affairs, but, however popular it was for a time, this could not be permanent. The policy of the labor government was bound to be provocative to the British to itself. The signs are multiplying that this development has begun. The most notable of all signs is in India, where, as Canada in itself has recognized, the British proposals do confirm the sincerity of the British promises of independence. But there are other signs -- for example in Egypt.

X X X

The policy Mr. Bevin inherited and continued has not only been inconsistent with the promises and views of the labor party, it has been at variance with the real interests of the British dominions. Fundamentally their interests are much like Americans'. The dominions desire peace; they wish to minimize the conflicts of empire and to be unengaged in them.

It is a reasonable surmise in view of what Field Marshal Smuts said about Britain being the mediator, that there must be a strong current of opinion in the dominions which holds that no good can come of the Churchill thesis of an Anglo-American alliance throughout the world against the Soviet Union. Certainly what Field Marshal Smuts said is the very opposite of what Mr. Churchill erosion.

The stakes evident that the Congress delegates had good reason for their fears. Forests -- and the logging business -- and the commercial supply of forest products -- are all on the way out unless forests are treated faster than they are cut and destroyed.

And who is he that will harm you, if ye be followers of that which is good? -- Peter 3: 13.

Canada Can't Afford It

The Canadian scene at present is a panorama of strikes and strike threats. That gives interest for people in this Dominion to an appeal which was recently made by the duty prime minister of Australia where a Labor Government is in power.

Mr. Forde, the gentleman in question, appealed to labor unions in the Commonwealth to refrain from strikes in essential industries because these would be disastrous to the Government's chances of re-election when polling day comes along later in the year.

Why disastrous? Everyone knows the answer. The stoppages of production, growing scarcities, and price increases would create popular interest which would press itself in the ballot boxes, defeat labor candidates and throw the Government out of power.

On paper, income taxation is the fairest of all ways of collecting public revenue. In theory it takes from every person according to his ability to pay. But the theory doesn't work. Partly because of defects in the present law. But partly also because there are too many ways of dodging the tax which it doesn't seem likely that any legislation can block.

The upshot of five years of heavy collection is that the whole question of income taxation is being worked on a fair and just basis is now being raised all across the Dominion. That is one of the major questions with which the Minister and parliament will have to grapple. Income taxation is at present the most unpopular of all kinds of taxes levied in Canada. That is the point from which to start reconstructing the system.

Burma, it is officially reported, has reverted to anarchy, bands of outlaws, bands of country and bordering and looting a still that is the origin of things which prevailed in Burma before the British took charge. The revival of piracy and smuggling element of the population it was that helped the Japanese destroy ordered government.

The Minister's Mail Bag

Finance Minister Tilley says he is getting about 400 letters a day telling what to put in the budget and what to leave out. He means of this professed assistance he will be able to make use of he did not indicate; nor to what extent the tendered advice would help to simplify the problem of getting in the two or three billion of tax-money that will have to be collected.

Without straining the imagination it can be surmised that a heavy proportion of these letters have to do with income taxation. That is almost certainly the subject most of the writers want to talk about, if conversation had run on the street is any indicator of the drift of popular interest.

On paper, income taxation is the fairest of all ways of collecting public revenue. In theory it takes from every person according to his ability to pay. But the theory doesn't work. Partly because of defects in the present law. But partly also because there are too many ways of dodging the tax which it doesn't seem likely that any legislation can block.

General elections are not in sight in Canada. But Canadians are undergoing one of the most difficult periods of their history with business which Mr. Forde says would drive the Australian voters into wrecking their Government. The inconvenience and loss imposed upon the public are just as real here as they would be in Australia, and the paralysis of the national effort at recovery just as widespread and serious.

Canada cannot afford to halt production in these crucial days, any more than Australia could afford to do that. But that is what we are doing when for any reason at all the carrying on of any important industrial concern is stopped. Where this is interrupted is caused by a strike, the strike loses wages, and the employer loses profits; but the nation loses the output of goods, and in cases loses also the opportunity to get its products into foreign markets while the rest of the world is exceptionally good as it is at the present time.

The cumulative effect of the creeping paralysis that is slowing down Canadian industry is true to make life harder for everybody in Canada; and to nullify the greatest opportunity this country ever had to move into markets abroad. Markets into which the products of other countries are flowing in increasing volume.

Strikes are too costly a luxury for Canadians to indulge in. But this line, from the nation's point of view, the epidemic of tie-ups now sweeping across the Dominion is an orgy of peculiarly ill-timed extravagance.

The Loggers See Trouble

Delegates to the Pacific Logging Congress at Banff were plainly concerned over the prospect that they may be put out of business after a while by the magnitude of their own operations.

They forecast that in the present trend continues the time will come when there will be no more logs to cut.

To avert that danger they urged measures to protect the forest more effectively against fire, against insects and against wasteful logging methods and called for a more carefully planned and longer scaled policy of reforestation. In other words, they want forests perpetuated in something like the present proportions.

The deputy minister of forests for British Columbia put the case in figures. Every year 20,000,000 little trees are planted in that province. But every year 15,000,000 little trees are cut. Careless loggers add their toll to the loss.

The stakes evident that

Today in Europe

By Randolph Churchill

PARIS -- During the Napoléonic wars, commerce between England and France stopped. English people arriving in Paris after 1815 were astounded to notice that, in the twenty years that had elapsed, Frenchmen had become entirely different in shape.

After the recent German occupation of France, the same phenomenon could be observed. The few English and American women one sees are easily distinguishable. Fashion, in fact, is following two completely different lines. Continental and Anglo-Saxon. For years, Anglo-Saxon women have tended to dress like men. Frenchmen, who adopted this fashion as an amusing novelty, have now reverted to the riot of femininity.

A visitor to a Parisian dress show may well be surprised by the audience. Around the room there are a heterogeneous lot of men, apparently all fishwives, dairy maids, and male and female lorry drivers. These are silk manufacturers, provincial buyers and editors of fashion magazines. The visitors treat them with far more respect and attention than they show to more elegant and outwardly promising customers.

Every season, there is one collection which stands out above its rivals in planning, taste and line. This year, the experts say it is that of Lucien Lelong. His collection is very French, very feminine. Though it is said that the article line are reverting to a slimmer line, the material-starved and coupon-hungry eye of an Englishwoman goggles at the acres of material which have been cut up to produce the draperies, bunches and basques of Lelong's beautiful dresses.

As for accessories, bags are bigger than ever, shoes look like surgical boots, and many women are carrying the new umbrella which is long, striped and elegant.

The Zone of Pressure

By Bruce Hutchinson

Between the boundaries of Turkey and Russia lie the lonely areas of Kars and Ardahan. For centuries they have been the battleground between the ancient Ottoman empire and the Russians. Again today they have become one of the key zones of international friction as Russia demands their possession and Turkey claims them for its own.

Since it is in Turkey, at the vital channel of the Dardanelles, that the interests of the western Allies and of expanding Russian canons into the serious collision, the government of the world are watching how Russia intends to go.

Russia up to recent times has never disputed Turkish ownership, which was recognized in the Treaty of Moscow in 1920, when Russia declared it was "prepared to relinquish to the government of Turkey the territories of the Dardanelles."

This year Russia began again its historic advance toward the warm water of the Mediterranean with a series of diplomatic offensives. It asked for a base in the Italian colonies of north Africa and another in the eastern Dodecanese islands.

Mr. Churchill revealed for the first time in his New York speech that Russia had also demanded not merely the opening of the Dardanelles to its ships, but a base actually commanding this vital waterway.

As part of the same plan Russia denounced its pact with Turkey, advanced its claim to Kars and Ardahan and conducted a "rally of nerves" against Turkey.

These pressures, with the pressure on Iran, are all part of a Russian policy which began with Peter the Great and extended to the Baltic and the northern seas lanes, now achieved, and a parallel progress into the Mediterranean, now in danger of progress.

Poison for Wolves Kills Off Eagles

TORONTO—Golden eagles, once frequent visitors in the winter season at Algoma provincial park, Ontario, have now been rare. Poisoned bait used to destroy wolves was fatal to many of the fine birds. One eagle, however, was found still alive by Ranger Jim Lavale while making a check on the wolf baits. It made a complete recovery and was sent to Riveleau, Ont., where it was to be released.

Now that the use of wolf poison has been discontinued, it is hoped that golden eagles will be seen more frequently soaring above the park. Bald eagles may be found, though rare, in the same areas. They are dead of winter. While no nests of this species have been found it is possible that they are still there. It is the bald eagle that makes the espree, or fish-hawk, drop its fish by intimidation and then, with a powerful downward swoop, grab the fish before it strikes the water.

Allied authorities have closed one eye on the fact that the choir went right on singing while the Nazis were in power. The Vienna Boy Choir went on tours to France, Belgium, Holland, Poland and Germany while Austria was considered a part of the Third Reich. The Vienna Boy Choir is singing now for Allied troops, but they all have an eye on the concert platform.

Father Joseph Schmitt, the priest who handles the administration of the choir, spent three weeks in the Nazi prison at Dachau. He was released and was forbidden to take any part in the organization during the Nazi regime in Austria, but he had not given up.

Now the boys who sang in America every year from 1930 to 1938 are around any more. A good many of them died fighting in Hitler's armies.

The choir was founded in 1498 and had a continuous existence to 1918 when it fell into the hands of the Habsburg dynasty. It took away its chief support.

It was founded again six years later after the Nazis took over.

Father Schmitt's main problem is finding food for these boys. However, he has managed to keep them from starving by getting them to sing to his birthplace in the Russian occupation zone and bringing back money and anything else he can scrounge up.

Not many of the boys who sing in the choir grow up to be great musicians. Some of them grow up to be musicians. Among those who sang in the choir were Franz Schubert, Joseph Haydn, Clemens Krause and Anton Bruckner.

Inside-Out Matter Real, Russian Scientist Finds

By Thomas R. Henry
Science Editor, North American News

WASHINGTON—Inside-out matter apparently is a reality. On a high Armenian mountaintop, Russia's best known physicist, Dr. George Gamow, has proved that one of the most basic truths of science, the weirdest of all, is true.

He has proved the existence of something which is the exact opposite of creation—the negatron, or negative proton.

Inside-out matter might be a source of energy a million times greater than atomic nucleus smashing. It will never, however, blow up the world. It will never be the agent of the ultimate doom, day in which all creation is now destroyed.

Some of the details of Prof. Kapitza's astounding discovery have just reached Washington, where they have been checked by some of the atomic physicists who first gauged the significance of cracking the uranium atom.

No Worry

Wend as are the implications, it

as much as an electron, but is much smaller.

Positive Electron

Some years ago there was discovered another elemental particle—the positron or positive electron. It was revealed through photographs of the tracks of subatomic particles through a cloud chamber in a strong magnetic field. By an involved technique, the tracks of the positron and the tracks of infinitesimal particles passing through such a chamber. As they pass through the magnetic field, the deflection indicates the charge and the magnitude of the mass of the particle.

Thus was found the positron particle with the same direction of deflection as a proton, but the mass of an electron.

As soon as an electron and a positron came together, they annihilated each other. Thus positrons could not exist in terrestrial matter. It was calculated that some of them, however, must pass through the reaches of the earth's atmosphere. Others may have come from beyond the earth or beyond the planetary system.

At this time, physicists began speculating on the possible existence of negative protons, which would mean inside-out matter.

A proton weighs nearly 2,000 times

as much as an electron, but is much smaller.

EDMONTON JOURNAL - EDMONTON, ALBERTA, JUNE 12, 1946 - EDMONTON BULLETIN

SAFETY LEADERS are these wise dogs, Bob and Chips, which here are showing a group of more than 1,000 London children that the only time to cross the street is when you have the signal. This demonstration in King's Road, Chelsea, took place during the noon rush hour. The traffic-wise dogs are doing a lot to impress due care on the children.

positrons annihilate each other. But mathematical calculations lead Prof. George Gamow of George Washington University here to believe the most likely hypothesis is that they come from other stars of the 30-60,000,000-star galactic system of the sun.

The most likely hypothesis, if they come from outer space at all, is that they came from a star system of great star systems, of comparable size to this galaxy, which millions of years ago exploded.

The star systems are hurtling about in space. Like the individual stars, they are explosive. Some day one might smash into another. Whether the neutrinos of one star system and the protons of another system, or the other, would make little difference for the mutual annihilation of the electrons and positrons would not be important.

Once if the neutrinos and protons annihilated each other the explosion would be immense.

Right now it seems as if ultra-terrestrial matter is beyond human reach or dream. But it will never be impossible for man to visit other planets or even for wars between planets.

To absorb the large number of unemployed during the post-war period, the U.S. has a plan of standardizing its highways.

On This All Must Agree

By Dorothy Thompson

In reading the newspapers, one gets the impression the leadership of the world is engaged in a competition of lunacy. For the sake of "security," millions are uprooted from their ancestral homes, and women and children are compressed into alien systems that can only be maintained by force. Peoples are divided by ideological struggles. Some believe that without private enterprise there can be no freedom; others that only Communism is salvation. Meanwhile, leaders of capitalist states violate every principle of Capitalism, and leaders of Communist states every principle of Communism.

They cannot agree on a defense policy, although there can be no American defense policy. National states cannot defend themselves, but the United States, not America not by oceanic distances, Britain not by her fleet, Russia not by her army and arachnean conception of a satellite protective ring. Previous concepts of war blew up at Hiroshima and Nagasaki, and with the V-2 rockets over London. The next war will be a nuclear holocaust decided by the fates of mankind by decided by throwing a switch. Victors will clear up the rubbish, bury the corpses, and establish, perhaps, military governments over dead wildernesses.

One thing holds our peace. Only we have the atomic bomb. But where will be restraint when Russia has atomic bombs, as she certainly will? The ones that belong to Italy or Yugoslavia when they are dead, nor to British miners who work for the State or private corporations, nor for the sake of Russian whether he perishes in a kolkhoz or on his own land; nor to an American woman whether she dies in nylon or bobby socks.

Mr. Molotov, Mr. Bevin and Mr. Byrnes, too, will atomize into identical elements, and the Kremlin will atomize into identical elements and will make the same kind of dust. If nothing else binds the world together, this should—that we are destined for the same fate—if we go on like this.
